

NAME:- RUSHIKESH SHIVANAND JAYBHAYE

ROLL NO:- 224028

PRN:-22110625

DIV:- D

BATCH:-D2

Assignment 2

Title:- Practice session to differentiate between prosperity and accumulation.

Aim:-To understand prosperity vs accumulation by discussion on –“What is meant by prosperity?. How can it be ascertained? Does accumulation ensure prosperity?”

Lets Firstly take look on what is meant by prosperity and accumulation

What is Prosperity:-

Prosperity refers to the state of having an abundance of material assets and money as well as other contributing factors like health and happiness.

What is Accumulation:-

Accumulation refers to the state of being rich or having an abundance of material assets and money.

How can we differentiate between prosperity and accumulation:-

The key difference between prosperity and accumulation is that the word prosperity is used to refer to a state of success, material gain, happiness and also good health. This highlights that prosperity can be used in various situations to denote different things. On the other hand, the word accumulation is mostly used when speaking of material gain only. Prosperity can be used to speak of health but accumulation cannot be used to speak of health.

How can we ensure prosperity:-

The word prosperity means that a prosperous person is not merely rich in a financial sense but also is successful. Here it is important to highlight that the accumulation of a lot of money cannot make a person prosperous. For that he needs to be successful as well. In this sense, the word has two meanings. Firstly it can mean that the person is happy, successful and is in good health. Secondly it can mean good fortune or financial stability. Thus we can conclude that only accumulation does not ensure prosperity but it is also one of the important aspects of it.